1. after the Chinese Communist rejection of the UN cease fire order, Marshal Rodion Ya. Malinowski, commander of the Soviet Far East military zone, was ordered to enforce the following precautions against possible UN commando attacks or bombing:
 - a. The curfew, which was started in November 1950, was strengthened in mid-December at all army and naval bases, important ports, and in Soviet territory bordering Korea and China.
 - b. Air defense practice began in mid-December 1950 for all areas mentioned in (a) above.
 - c. Beginning 10 December 1950 all leaves were cancelled for Soviet military personnel, and those on leave were recalled.
 - d. Old men, women, children, and non-essential workers have been dispersed from cities along the Trans-Siberian Railroad and were resettled elsewhere. Military and defense industry installations situated along the Siberian railway are restricted areas and no unauthorized persons are permitted to enter.
2. Similar measures were also enforced on Soviet Army, Navy, and Air Forces in Port Arthur and the Dairen area.
